Australasian Performing Right Association (APRA) is an association administering the rights of the world's composers, songwriters and publishers in Australia and New Zealand.

Established in 1926, APRA represents more than 100,000 Australasian composers and publishers through direct membership, and many more throughout the world under reciprocal, bilateral contracts.

Australasian Mechanical Copyright Owners Society (AMCOS) represents virtually all music publishers in Australia and New Zealand and, by way of reciprocal arrangements, the majority of the world's music publishers, as well as a large number of composers and writers.

While APRA and AMCOS remain independent companies (each with their own Board of Directors), since July 1997, APRA has managed the operations of AMCOS and the organisations' staff and offices have been amalgamated.

APRA AMCOS is committed to improving business awareness of music copyright. APRA AMCOS is also committed to providing excellent service to all members and licensees.

With approximately 147,000 businesses licensed and 100,000 individual and publisher members throughout Australia and New Zealand, it is crucial that APRA AMCOS have systems in place to ensure that it provides the best service possible at all times.

There will however be times when people that we deal with may have cause or wish to make some comment on some aspect of the conduct or operation of APRA AMCOS.

APRA AMCOS has developed a Complaints Handling Policy and Procedure that will ensure that any complaints received by APRA AMCOS are handled in an efficient, transparent and fair manner.
