Complying with the Copyright Act (1968)

Securing an APRA AMCOS licence will meet your legal obligations under the Copyright Act. The Australian legislation is based on the authority of the Australian Constitution. If you use copyright music in your download service, streaming service or podcast you need permission (a licence) from the authors of those works. By 'use' we mean anything from copying music from one device to another, streaming music through an iPad and more.

APRA AMCOS (which stands for the Australasian Performing Right Association and the Australasian Mechanical Copyright Owners Society) is a non-profit organisation which licenses rights in music on behalf of 95,000 members linked with 170 affiliated similar organisations worldwide. We pay your annual licence fees directly back to the songwriters, composers and publishers who own the music you're using. Legal alternatives to securing an APRA AMCOS licence are on page 3.

You can get independent information on copyright from the Australian Copyright Council www.copyright.org.au.

Understanding copyright in music.

When a business or individual wants to broadcast, communicate or publicly perform a sound recording, they usually require two licences – one from APRA AMCOS and one from PPCA (Phonographic Performance Company of Australia) or each copyright owner (usually the record company).

APRA AMCOS: Provides licences covering the copyright in the song (lyrics, composition etc) and represents the interests of songwriters or composers and publishers.

PPCA: Provides licences covering the recording and/or music video of the song (a particular recorded performance), and represents the interests of recording artists and record labels.

What the licence doesn't cover.

- > $12,000: Websites that generate over $12,000 per year and/or have usage above the maximum amounts listed in the table below.
- Interactive Streaming: where customers have the ability to select songs and create and save playlists.
- Semi-Interactive Streaming: where listeners can influence playlists but are unable to select individual songs.
- Video On-demand: where a user can buy, rent or subscribe to digital movies, television programs and concert films.
- Synchronisation rights: to create any audio visual content, synchronisation must be first cleared with the publisher to create the content. The client would then require a licence to make this content available online.

How long does the licence last?

Your licence will continue unless it is terminated by either party with three months notice. Licence fees are renewed and reassessed each year to take into account any changes to the service.

When do I pay?

You pay when you first take out the licence, then just once a year.

Example

A young DJ is starting a website for club music enthusiasts. Access to the website is free and there is no advertising or sponsorship associated with the service. Users can access the site and listen to live audio webcasts from nightclubs, stream pre-recorded DJ mixes and download podcasts that are a mixture of music and club culture news. She estimates in the first year there will be approximately 25-30,000 live webcast sessions (Webcasting Tier B with a fee of $550 per year), 30-40,000 on-demand DJ mix sessions (On Demand Services Tier B with a fee of $550 per year), and no more than 30,000 downloads of podcasts (Podcasts (featured music) Tier A with a fee of $275 per year).

The total licence fee for the first year is $1,375.00.

What does APRA AMCOS do with my fees?

We care about ensuring the licence fees you pay are distributed in the most economical and accurate way possible. We deduct our expenses from the revenue we receive and then distribute your fees to the songwriters, composers and music publishers whose works we have licensed to you.

This means for every dollar we collect, about 86 cents is returned to music creators. At 13.78 per cent, our operational costs compare very favourably to organisations providing the same service overseas.

We ask Online Mini licensees to provide music reports each quarter. This ensures licence fees are distributed to the correct writers. If they are unable to do so we apply a distribution by analogy.

Other licences

If you are using sound recordings, you will need to obtain licences from the relevant copyright owner: generally a record label, artist or digital aggregator.
